338 graduate at Fall Convocation

R.E. Powell, Chancellor of McGill University, caps a B.Sc. student, one of the three hundred and thirty-eight who received their degrees at yesterday's fall convocation.

Hogtown beware:

Big Red Train rolls again

Watchout Hogtown. The Big Red Train is taking on fuel for the annual excursion to the home of the Double Blue.

For the uninitiated, it means that come next Friday, a trainload of Redmen supporters will be on their way to Toronto to cheer McGill's football twelve on to victory against the U of T.

All tickets for the merry weekend are on sale at the Union Box Office, and prices are as follows:

The round trip train fare is $13, and accommodations per night are: single—$6, double—$9, 3-in-a-room—$12, and 4-in-room—$15. Each additional person in the room will cost $3 extra.

Stadium tickets

Stadium tickets, costing $2, and the $2 bond for train damages, which, in the light of previous trips, is required, can be picked up along with train tickets and hotel accommodations at the Union Box Office today, Wednesday, and Thursday.

If no damages occur, the $2 will be refunded within two weeks.

The train leaves Windsor Station on Friday, October 11th, at 4 pm Daylight Saving Time and arrives in Toronto at 10 pm.

Return trip

Tickets are good for the return trip on any train until October 15th. Trains leave Toronto Saturday at 11:15 pm; Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday at 9:50 am, 3:30 pm, and 11:05 pm.

The trains arrive in Montreal on Saturday at 8:45 am, Sunday at 4:50 pm, 9:45 pm, and 7:35 am; and on Monday at 6:20 pm, 9:45 pm, and 7:25 am.

All accommodations must be made here in Montreal in advance or the reduced rates will not be possible—especially in the case of large multiple room accommodations which cannot be arranged for upon arrival in Toronto.

So arise McGillians and support your team! See you on the train!

SAC presidency decided tomorrow

The by-elections for the Chairman of the Students' Athletics Council will be held tomorrow. Nominees for this position are M. Cookie Lazarus and David A. Krause.

Polls will be open from 9 am to 4 pm. Students are reminded to bring their identity cards or claim checks with them in order to vote. Graduate students may obtain the necessary identification papers to vote from the Graduate Faculty office.

The SEC Representatives from all faculties are requested to pick up their papers at the SEC office today, and to present themselves at the SEC office at 8:30 am tomorrow, on the day of the election.

Candidates

Cookie Lazarus, a second year Law student, has participated in the programmes of the Intercollegiate Athletics Council, the Students' Intramural Recreational Council, and the Students' Athletics Council. In addition, he has been a member of McGill's boxing and wrestling teams.

David Krause, a fourth year Arts student, was last year's Athletics Representative of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society, has been a member of the ASUS Executive, and the SEC Education Committee.

All male students are entitled to vote in this by-election.

by ANNE BEATTS

At the opening of the 1963 Founder's Day Fall Convocation, the Reverend Eric George Jay, Dean of the Faculty of Divinity, invoked a blessing upon "those who learn and those who teach within these walls" as Chancellor R.E. Powell conferred special honours upon five outstanding candidates, and awarded degrees to 338 of those who learnt and were taught at McGill.

Two of these candidates for special honours were former McGill graduates, both in the field of medicine. Dr. Frances Kelsey received the Graduates' Society Gold Medal, its highest award, for her role in forestalling the sale of the deformity-causing drug thalidomide in the United States.

Dr. Frank Horsfall, also a graduate of this university, received the degree of Doctor of Science, honoris causa, at the ceremonies yesterday afternoon in the Currie Gym. A second honorary doctorate in the field of science was awarded to Commodore Owen Connor Struan Robertson, Arctic scientist and principal convocation speaker.

Award for service

Agnes Matthews, immediate past principal of St. George's School in Montreal, and a graduate of Mount Allison and Columbia Universities, was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws for her "distinguished service" in the field of education.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was also conferred upon the Honourable Paul Comtois, the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, for "Les services éminents rendus à notre pays dans le domaine des affaires municipales, provinciales, et nationales."

The principal and vice-chancellor welcomed all present on this auspicious occasion, and reminded his listeners of the particular significance of Founder's Day.

Memory Flashes

"As the events of the years that followed flash by in memory we are alternately depressed by the sordid state of the University in its first few years until exhilarated by the surge of progress in the latter half of the 19th century that brought the University to a prominent position on this continent and in the world," Dr. Robertson said in his address.

Commodore O. C. S. Robertson, Deputy Executive Director of the Arctic Institute of North America, already holds the George Medal, the Canada Decoration, and the Massey Medal; yet he continues to say that he is a mere fish-head sailor and no scientist. To relieve him of this notion, the University conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Science, honoris causa, and invited him to be Convocation speaker.

Address

In his address, Commodore Robertson concerned himself chiefly with what, admittedly, is his favourite topic: "What is required to bring the Arctic to its rightful place in the affairs of man?"

The answer is "right here on this platform," the speaker said. "Research to find out what is there and to what use we can put it. Education to ensure that this knowledge is passed on to those who can and will use it."

Symposium discussed

He discussed the symposium held on this campus three weeks ago to consider Arctic affairs. Commodore Robertson said that "we have been conditioned to think of the Arctic as only a place of high adventure where men are frozen to death and eaten by polar bears."

Obviously this is not so. The Arctic is a land of great variety, rather than a homologous continent, and it does not change. What does and is changing is our appraisal of the Arctic—changes brought about by research, technical development, and education.

The speaker took each of these fields in turn to impress upon his audience the importance of each one of them.

"I did hear it suggested that Arctic enthusiasts are a bunch of fanatics—that they belong to the crackpot fringe," he said, "that they march to the beat of a different drum. Perhaps they do, but at least they march with their heads up and in strong cadence."

Audience encouraged

Commodore Robertson encouraged his audience to listen to the beat of that drum and to pick a career in a science which deals with the inter-relationships of man. "The job your parents and grandparents started is not finished and it will not be finished until our northern lands are really a part of this country," he said.

Foreign students

Canadian Immigration officers will be in the Admissions Office, McTavish Street, today and tomorrow to interview all foreign students registered in the University. Interviews will take place between 9 am and 12 pm, and between 2 and 4:30 pm. Students should bring their student identity card, their passport and their temporary entry permit to the interview.

For The Good Of The People

Trade Unionism is identified, in the minds of many people, with the cause of the common man. It represents to them the average guy fighting back against the evils of the capitalist system, against the machinations of big business, against the corporation managers who seek only to fatten their own purses at the expense of their employees.

In short, they regard the Trade Union movement as representing the people as a whole in their fight against the selfish interests of a few.

All of this is in large part true, or at least it was true forty and fifty years ago when modern trade unionism was getting its start. The current dock-workers strike demonstrates, however, that far from operating for the benefit of the general populace, a trade union can often represent interests as particular as that of any corporation; indeed, its action may well be detrimental to the nation as a whole.

We do not condemn the International Longshoremen's Association for calling a strike at the very moment when 228 million bushels of grain are due to be shipped to Russia. The strike is perfectly legal, and it was astute of the union leaders to call it when their bargaining position was at its best.

But let no one try to argue that the strike or the results of the strike will be beneficial to the nation as a whole merely because certain concessions will be made by management to the longshoremen. The decision of the ILA has delayed shipment of the grain to Russia, and may in fact jeopardize the sale itself.

This wheat sale is of the utmost importance to the Canadian economy. Its negotiation was and its successful completion will be far more important to Canada than any wage boosts to be won by a group of longshoremen. It is in the interest of all the people not to have a strike at this time; we don't know whether the Government should go so far as to seek an injunction against it, as was suggested recently by Alvin Hamilton. Nevertheless, this is a possibility if the strike threatens to last for very long.

While the saying "What's good for General Motors is good for the country" has become more of a joke than anything else, the same is often said, and seriously believed, about trade unions. We contend that this is often not so; in fact trade unionism has come to resemble big business more and more in that it all too frequently sacrifices the common good to its own particular goals.

No one who even casually perused this newspaper last week could have failed to notice the prominence given the Université de Montréal. No doubt this to some appeared unwarranted, unwise, or unwelcome. To the wiser, however, it offered an invaluable glimpse of what is going on at that campus, so near physically, so far in spirit. Of course, the Daily is neither so optimistic nor so naive as to think that these articles themselves are going to resolve very much. Those who read them are already aware of the 'problem' (what a sanitary, antiseptic little word!), and those who don't care to be aware of the problem will soon choke on their own fatuous complacency. But these articles, and the exchange of Daily — Quartier Latin columns constitute a pledge, a determination to keep open channels of communication, channels that were neither used nor needed (so we thought) in the past. It is we who are trying to keep these channels open because we are now the ones who need them.

The French community is marching purposefully towards a number of often vague objectives; before its prods and thrusts the English community, if such an entity exists, is as a moist sponge. If at times we seem more substantial than a mere sponge, it is only because our back (to completely mix the simile) is increasingly against the wall. We lack cohesiveness and, since Kierans was absorbed into the Quebec hierarchy, we lack any kind of leadership. Both these characteristics, I might add, are equally absent on the national level: hence our neurotic search for a national identity and the merry-go-round of elections.

At any rate, let's stop kidding ourselves: the ones who are really going to suffer from any further deterioration of French-English relations are ourselves. English Canada would certainly be poorer for the loss of Quebec, and French Quebec might suffer economic setbacks, but it is the English Quebecers, you and I, who are going to feel the full effects. Common sense would therefore dictate that we be the ones to lead the search for an equitable and acceptable arrangement that among other things will enable us to continue to live in this province.

An admirable example of what I have tried to say is provided by the team of negotiators (one can use no other word) that represented McGill at the recent NFCUS Conference. The U. of M. had proposed that the structure of NFCUS be radically changed, to provide for separate English and French blocs with a weak superstructure. The reaction of English Canada was diffuse and uncertain; McGill, the major English university in Quebec, provided the initiative and leadership necessary to transform a potentially crippling blow to the unity of but one more national organization into a constructive step towards a more workable and satisfactory body. We were undoubtedly fortunate to have been able to send such remarkably able and intelligent delegates, but what they did was in effect what McGill, and more generally the English of Quebec, should consider its duty to do: to act as the 'honest broker' in interpreting one group to the other, in trying to replace the cheap stereotypes of each with a more sympathetic understanding. This can and should be McGill's role, and its conduct at NFCUS has amply demonstrated how ably it can fulfill it. But first things first: you, English-speaking Quebecers, you have the opportunity to see French Canada at first hand: do something about it, learn to speak French so you don't feel on the defensive, read French newspapers so you know what is happening in your own province, and, above all, feel personally involved in what is being done on your behalf, and... do something yourselves.

Raft sails tonight; Four profs debate

Four professors will find themselves aboard a raft tonight, trying to persuade a highly skeptical audience that they deserve to be saved from a horrible end in the waves.

The event is the annual Professors' Raft, to be held tonight at 8:30 in the Union Ballroom. The participants will be Professor Dudek, representing Arts, Professor Holcomb of Science, Dean Armstrong of Commerce, and Professor de Stein, defending the Faculty of Engineering.

Professors attempt

Each professor will attempt, with arguments in favor of his own faculty and satirical remarks about the others, to persuade the audience that his faculty equips students to do the most for mankind and world advancement. The professor who succeeds may stay aboard the raft. The others must sink or swim.

The decision as to who remains afloat is made at the end of the evening by the students, who register their choice with various forms of noise. The verdict is announced by the moderator, Professor Boyes of Genetics, after which comes an informal meeting in the Lounge between students and the four professors, as well as any others who may be assembled in the audience.

Freshman reception

The Professors' Raft is a part of the Freshman Reception program, and is being organized this year by Garth Martin. It provides a chance for students and professors to get together, an outlet for possible repressed feelings of hostility, and a highly entertaining evening for all.

Five winners receive prizes from Old McGill competition

Thursday's and Friday's prize winners of the Old McGill '64 campaign number five have been announced. Ross Murphy, B.Sc. 2, has won a ticket for two to the Plumbers' Ball and Philippa Parsons, B.A. 2, a five dollar gift certificate from Henry Morgan and Company.

W.A.A. presents varied program

by MARSHA STERN
Women's Sports Editor

The Women's Athletic Association is going all out this week, with all activities ready to roll. The opening meetings of most of the clubs will be held within the next few nights, while others are well under way.

Already in progress are the soccer team, swimming practices, and the intramural tennis tournament. As well, the majorettes and the cheerleaderettes gave their first presentation at Saturday's game against Western.

The remaining games in the tennis tournament must be played by October 12. All those left should contact their opponent to arrange for the match.

Swimming

The practices for the speed swimming team are held every day from 4:45 to 5:45 pm in the Currie pool. More members are still needed for the team, so anyone interested is asked to come to any of the practices. No experience is needed.

Synchronized swimming will begin instruction and coaching tonight at the R.V.C. pool at 7 pm for beginners and advanced at 8:15 pm. The diving practices take place every night from 5-6 pm in the Currie pool. With the able coaching of Misses Bean and Dubrue, the team should repeat its championship performance this year.

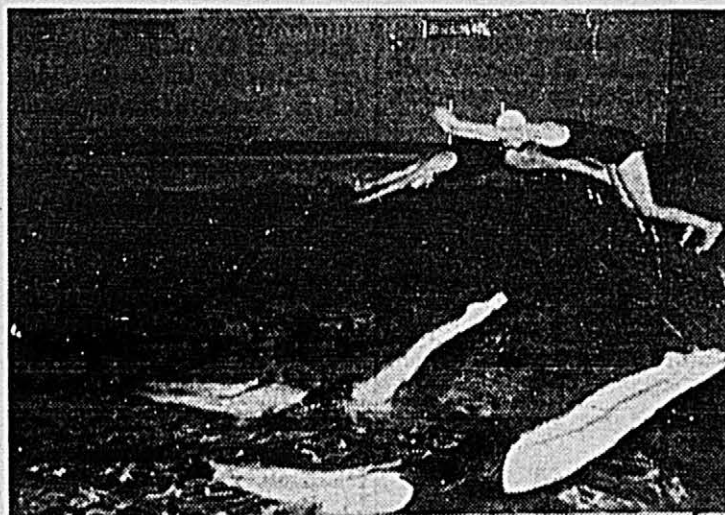

Modern dance

There will be a meeting of all men and women interested in modern dance Thursday evening, October 10 at 7:30 pm in the R.V.C. gym. Colour slides will be shown, and simple dance movements will be taught. Dress is shorts or slacks. Miss Wagner, the advisor, has had much experience in dance instruction, and she will be on hand to answer any questions. Beginners are welcome.

Volleyball will start its season this Wednesday night at 7:30 pm in the Currie gym. At this time, anyone interested in playing intramural volleyball can sign up for a team at the gym. The larger faculties are expected to field competitors in the inter-faculty tournament, while the residences and fraternities should be represented as well. The intercollegiate team will be chosen from those attending the intramurals, and freshmen are eligible. Practices will begin at once.

Basketball

The intramural basketball tournament will begin this Thursday,

Maureen Rogers (14) of McGill Intermediate Women's Basketball team takes this jump ball during a game between the YMCA and McGill last year. Forward Heidi Ewing (18) prepares to receive the ball, while defencemen June Kermode (25) and Nancy MacDonald remain cautiously still.

October 10 at 7:30 pm in the Currie gym, where the teams will be made up. They will consist mainly of separate faculty, fraternity, and residence groups as far as possible, but where there is a deficiency of players, a composite team will be created. There will be time to practice before every game. The intercollegiate squad will be picked from those who turned out for the intramurals. Both an intermediate and a senior team will be chosen for intercity play.

Wednesday will see the start of the bowling season. The opening tournament is set for 8 pm at the Pines Bowling Academy, 3720 Park Avenue. This is for those who have some bowling experience, as there will not be any instruction. Shoes can be rented.

Fencing will start on Thursday evening at 7:30 pm in the Turner-Bone room of the Currie gym. There will be some instruction given, so beginners are urged to come out. Regular meetings of the club will be held every Monday and Thursday from 7-10 pm.

The riflery club will open the year on Thursday, October 10, at 7 pm at the rifle range of the Currie gym. There will be coaching provided for novices. Competitions with other groups will be arranged during the year.

Other events

The intramural archery tournament will begin today and continue through Thursday, with shooting daily from 12:30-3 pm at the middle field in front of the Winter Stadium. Those interested in intercollegiate archery can practice at this time. There will be a practice for the intercollegiate soccer team on Friday, October 11 from 4-6 pm on the lower campus. New members are still welcome.

Coed Badminton club will organize tonight, shuttlecocks supplied

The Badminton Club is now in the process of organizing what they hope will prove to be a highly promising season. All those men and women who are interested in participating are asked to come to the first meeting which will be held at the Sir Arthur Currie Gym, this evening from 7 to 10 pm.

It is the hope of the club to be able to field a fine intercollegiate team, as well as to provide a good deal of sociable fun and recreation.

The squad from McGill last year placed third in the Intercollegiate Championship held at Queen's. This year the club has engaged Stan Cutts as its coach, who was the professional world champion from 1946 to 1955.

All those who are interested in attending are requested to appear in whites. Although shuttlecocks will be supplied by the club, you must bring your racquets.

With the assistance of Mr. H. Ryan, Director of the Intramural Program, and student Kim Singhal, the Badminton Club should prove to be a big attraction at McGill this winter.

TENNIS

These players will represent McGill in the Intercollegiate Tennis tournament to be held at the University of Montreal, October 9, 10, and 11. Singles Team: Steve Chandler, Bob Kelder, John Tibbits and Alex Savran. Doubles Team: Chandler-Bruce, Denny-Brown, No. 2 —Kelder and Tibbits.

These racing dives were practiced diligently for competition by the women of the McGill Racing-Swimming Team last year. The team brought home the championship for the 1962-63 season.
